Packing and Shipping:

Weichai Diesel Generator Packaging and Shipping

Weichai Diesel Generator is packed and shipped in accordance with standard industry protocols. The packaging is designed to protect the unit from damage during the shipping process. The generator is placed in a wooden crate with foam padding to protect the generator from any possible external impacts.

The crate is then sealed with plastic wrap and then secured with metal bands. The generator is then marked with the appropriate shipping information, including the weight, dimensions, and destination. The package is then loaded onto the delivery truck and transported to its destination.

Once the package has arrived, it is unloaded and inspected for any damage. If the package is in good condition, the generator is then delivered to its destination. The generator is then installed and tested to ensure it is in proper working condition.
